

Our flexible problem-solving approach is intended to fit the needs and budgets of small and medium enterprises where product safety is only one of many responsibilities of individual managers.

However, we are also been consulted by multinational consumer product suppliers who have in-house safety experts and highly developed procedures, but seek an audit or an independent evaluation of one problematic issue.

As we do not have extensive permanent staff to keep in work or test facilities to maintain, you will not be pressured to form a long-term or exclusive consulting relationship. Instead we can - if required - direct you to the independent experts and test laboratories that have the most experience of a particular type of product, hazard control solution or testing technique. Alternatively, we can put together and co-ordinate an ad-hoc team of freelance experts to deliver a solution to a particular safety problem. In any case, you only contract to pay for our expertise by the hour or an agreed quotation for a project stage.